DOES RECONCILIATION TAKE HUMILITY?

“MY CHILD, conduct your affairs with humility,” the Book of Sirach says. Saint Augustine was once asked: What is the secret of holiness? He said it is humility. Then he said the second and the third secrets of holiness are also humility. In order to grow in holiness you need humility, and there is no better way to become humble than to participate in the sacrament of Reconciliation. Sin is predominantly an act of pride. So forgiveness comes from the opposite: being humble. There is no greater act of humility than to say, “Bless me, Father, for I have sinned.” And that brings about God’s grace.

A benefit of every sacrament is an encounter with Christ, and one of the greatest things that Jesus did was forgive sinners. When you go to Reconciliation you are encountering the same Christ who forgave Peter and so many others in the gospels and who welcomed Matthew the tax collector and the other disciples even though they had let him down during his hour of suffering.

Reconciliation is a personal encounter with Jesus who is full of mercy and compassion, and there is no greater way to experience God’s love than to experience God’s forgiveness over and over again.

Next week’s scripture insights:

Readings for Sunday, February 17, 2019 • Sixth Sunday in Ordinary Time: Jer 17:5–8 ✠ Ps 1:1–2, 3, 4 and 6 ✠ 1 Cor 15:12, 16–20 ✠ Lk 6:17, 20–26

The verses from the book of the Prophet Jeremiah sound more like something from the Book of Wisdom or Proverbs. They interrupt a foretelling of punishment and exile for the sins of the people. Right in the middle of that, are placed these reflections about what is worth putting trust in and what is not.

Two images from nature are employed to focus the contrast. The “cursed” person who trusts in “flesh” or exclusively in other “human beings” and so not in the Lord, are like a barren bush. Fruitlessly that bush is planted in what cannot nourish or sustain. That person is contrasted with the one who does put trust in the Lord. That person is a tree planted near a stream. That tree fears not the rejection of weather and drought but yields fruit in all seasons.

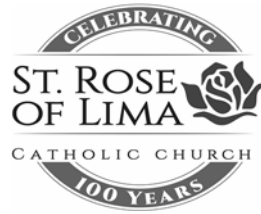

These verses remind the people of Israel that their foretold punishment is a result of not trusting in the God of their creation. They have become like the barren bush in a desert of fruitlessness. The prophet is telling them that they are going to receive what they deserve.

We hear in the Gospel, Luke’s version of the Beatitudes. We are more familiar with these sayings from Matthew’s perspective in the section known as the Sermon on the Mount. Luke presents four of them, plus four “woe-to-you’s.” So here in the Gospel, as in the First Reading, we have a contrast of attitudes and consequences.

Luke pictures Jesus as speaking directly to his disciples and not primarily to the crowds. He presents Jesus also as speaking of a “now” reality of their attitude towards possessions of four kinds. The spirituality of Luke’s presentation of Jesus is living free from the falsely-personal identity which comes from wealth, self-satisfaction, relational possessiveness and personal adulation or popularity. More simply, whom or what do you trust for life’s meaning and happiness?

In keeping with the spirit of the First Reading, we can say that the person who takes the “now” train trusts that it really leads to blessed happiness. That person trusts that only other persons, only material things, only personal popularity is worth the living. Those who take the “later” train have an attitude towards all other human beings, other materiality’s, personal esteem as very good and gifts from God which lead to God. Those persons love the gifts, reverence them, but do not make gods of them. By their attitude towards themselves and all else, they are saying that the Giver is not yet done giving and the best is yet to come, but later.

Jesus is not a hunch we play. Jesus is the Word of God calling each one of us to decide how we will relate with life. There is no doubt that there is something within us that wants it all and now and forever, or for at least until we can find something better. That is common sense, but we are invited to have an uncommon sense. We are to be unusual about how we answer our natural self-centered drives. They are not bad in themselves, but they can lead us to the barren desert of self-production. What we get is not a curse but what we deserve!
